MLA is a style of documentation that determines how you cite sources. It determines what you put on the Works Cited, which is a list of the works actually used in the paper, and in the parenthetical references, the places within the body of the paper where you reference where the information that is not your own ideas came from. How you format both the Works Cited and the parenthetical references will determine to a certain extent what kind of source the information came from. It is important, though, that you cite and format this information accurately so that you do not inadvertently plagiarize.

WORKS CITED Arrange entries alphabetically, according to the last name of each author/editor or the first word of the title if the author is unknown. Articles -- a, an, and the -- at the beginning of a title are not considered first words. Thus A Handbook of Critical Approaches to Literature would be alphabetized under H. Do NOT number the entries on a Works Cited. The second and subsequent lines of entries are indented five spaces. Entries are double spaced, without extra spaces in between. Note that for the publication information that city is given, not state. The exception would be to include both city and state, if the city is not a well-known one.

New rules for MLA (as of April 2009) require that you indicate what kind of medium you are citing (i.e., Print, Web, Television, Film, Lecture, etc), and underlining is no longer used (except in hand-written texts). Online sources no longer require a URL, but check to see if your instructor wants you to include one. Many web source entries now require a publisher name, a date of publication, and/or page numbers. When no publisher name appears on the website, write n.p. for no publisher given. When sites omit a date of publication, write n.d. for no date. For online journals that appear only online (no print version) or on databases that do not provide pagination, write n. pag. for no pagination.

a book by a single author

a book by two or three authors a book by more than three authors

two or more works by the same author

an edited book

a work in an anthology

an article in a scholarly journal an unsigned (anonymous) article in a magazine

“Solzhenitsyn: An Artist Becomes an Exile.” Time 25 Feb. 1974: 34+. Print. [+indicates pages are not consecutive] a signed article in a magazine

an article in a newspaper

Brummitt, Chris. “Indonesia’s Food Needs Expected to Soar.” Boston Globe 1 Feb. 2005: A7. Print. [Note: when the city in which the newspaper is not specified in the title, include it in brackets after the name of the newspaper: Press Enterprise [Riverside]] an unsigned (anonymous) article in a reference work a published interview

a film or video

a song

Blige, Mary J. “Be without You.” The Breakthrough. Geffen, 2005. CD.

information from a Web site

Author. “Title of document.” Title of Web site. Sponsor of Web site. Update date (“n.d.” if there is no date). Medium. Date of access. [NOTE: this is the basic format; you should try to fill in the blanks as appropriate] online book

work from a database

Online newspaper

FOR OTHER TYPES OF SOURCES, PLEASE SEE A WRITER’S REFERENCE BY DIANA HACKER (AVAILABLE ON RESERVE)

PARENTHEtical references
Inside the parenthetical reference, you will put the author/editor or title, depending on what you used on the Works Cited, along with the page number (omitting p.). If your Works Cited entry started with a title, you should use the same title (or an abbreviated one, as long as it clearly points to the entry on the Works Cited), formatted with quotation marks or italics/underline, depending on the original title. Thus, a work written by Alice Walker, from which you quoted material found on pages 110-12 would have a parenthetical reference of (Walker 110-12). Notice you do not repeat the hundred’s place but do repeat the ten’s. If the source lacks page numbers, as is the case with many Web sources, you may omit page numbers. If you are quoting a source that quotes something else, use “qtd. in” within the parenthetical citation (this will NOT be the case for literature).

Please note that quotation marks come before the parentheses; end punctuation is omitted FROM the quote (with the exception of question marks and exclamation points) and placed after the parentheses. (An exception is found when using an indented long quotation, in which case the period comes before the parentheses.)